R. M. HOPKINS, State Evangelist.

Through Cars on Interurban.

Blue Grass Traction Company's cars will run directly through from Georgetown to Paris and vice versa without change at Lexington center, this schedule to take effect on and after July 23, 1907, which is today.

Shooting At Carlisle.

While resisting arrest at Carlisle Ernest Cameron was shot twice through the legs by Deputy Sheriff James Mitchell as he was fleeing from the officer. The wounds were not serious and Cameron made his escape. Sheriff Mitchell had a warrant for Cameron charging him with a breach of the peace.

Generous Gift.

It was learned in New York Saturday that Mrs. Russell Sage had recently given $250,000 to the fund for the relief of the aged and indigent females in the city of New York.

New Saloon Opens.

I wish to inform the public in general and my friends and old customers in particular that I have opened up a first-class saloon in the stand lately vacated by C. D. Lucas. I have in stock 25 barrels of Vanhook that have seen nine summers, all of this age whisky that is on the market. Our draught and bottled beer will be kept right. You are invited to call.

Respectfully,
JNO. A. SCHWARTZ.

May Lose His Wheat.

Lew Bruce, a farmer, residing in the Minerva precinct, Mason county, went to Maysville Friday to try and get some one to thresh his wheat. He would not join the Farmer's Union, and because of this, he claims, he cannot hire anyone to do his threshing and his wheat is now in danger of being ruined. He has about 900 bushels.

102 In The Shade.

The thermometer in front of this office, hanging in the shade of the awning—registered 102 yesterday afternoon. It might be hotter in a certain place we have heard tell of, but after the heat of the last few days we are going to make extra efforts to keep from going there. Don't care to take any chances on any hotter places at this writing.

A Hug Didn't Work.

At Marysville, O., when the Robinson Amusement Company, of Cincinnati, was loading the animals on the cars for Adrian, Mich., Sunday morning, Julia, the ferocious female lion, broke the rope, mashed down the partition separating the female lions and a brown bear and killed the latter, which was tied. The bear tried to hug the lion, but was soon killed. The affair created considerable excitement.

Paris to Have Natural Gas.

According to some authorities all that is necessary for Paris to have natural gas is for our citizens to give expression as to how bad they want it.

Capt. John Tonkin, of Oil City, Pa., general manager of the Central Kentucky Natural Gas Company, that supplies Lexington, will visit Paris in a few days to interview our city officials and citizens regarding the matter.

Our people are anxious to secure natural gas and we are sure Capt. Tonkin will meet with an enthusiastic reception when he visits our city.

Fall Meeting at Lexington.

A fall race meeting will be given in Lexington and the dates chosen will probably be from September 19 through September 27 or 28.

President J. N. Camden, Jr., of the Kentucky Association, authorizes this announcement in the current issue of the Kentucky Farmer and Breeder.

The association has made application for the dates to the State Racing Commission and that application will in all probability be granted.

Harness.

See Lavin & Connell's large stock of harness, saddles, etc., on their second floor before you buy. 28-tf

Getting Together.

A telegram from Chicago Saturday says that J. C. Rogers, receiver for the American Reserve Bond Company and Southern Mutual Investment Company has been made the Chicago receiver for the two companies. The books and assets of the two companies have been turned over to him to prevent a long fight in the Federal Courts.

For Sale.

Two new 5-room cottages with bath, pantry, and necessary outbuildings. Terms, one-third cash, balance like paying rent. Good lot with concrete walks. Apply to 19-3t DR. HENRY.

Big Shipment of Lambs.

Thomas McClintock & Sons shipped last week 1,000 lambs from Paris, and 1,000 from Cynthiana, to S. S. & Co., at Chicago. They also shipped one car load of hogs to the Cincinnati market and purchased in Bourbon and adjoining counties 300 export cattle for delivery in August and September, at from 5 1/2 to 6 cents per pound.

Desirable Lot—A Bargain.

If you want to buy a desirable lot, within a few minutes walk of the court house or depot, for the small sum of $200 you had better see about it at once by calling up or at this office. 23-tf

New Bank At Nepton.

The Citizen's Bank at Nepton opened its doors for business at 9 o'clock Saturday, with R. G. Wilmot, of Broadhead, cashier. J. W. Myall is its president and W. Y. Williams vice president. The directors are amongst the most successful business men of that community.

JUST THE THING FOR HOT WEATHER.

What could be better than a Gas Stove this hot weather? It is cheaper than coal, perfectly safe and we guarantee every one to bake perfectly.

PARIS GAS LIGHT CO.

Prolific Porker.

Thos. Erksine, of Winchester, has a sow that is doing her best to bring down the price of porkers. On February 17th she presented her owner with thirteen living pigs, and on June 30th with twelve more, making a total of twenty-five piglets within less than five months. She answers to the name of "Carrie Nation," and weighs about three hundred pounds at two years of age.

Old Hickory.

Close out prices in Genuine Old Hickory porch furniture at J. T. Hinton's.

Jewell Kelley Company To Open Season At The Grand.

The popular Jewell Kelley and his excellent Stock Company will open the theatrical season at the Grand Opera House again this season.

Mr. Kelley will be remembered to the theatre-goers of Paris as one of the most popular actors that ever plays our city. For the past two seasons Mr. Kelley has opened his season in Paris and his company and plays have always been above the average seen at popular prices.

This season Mr. Kelley claims to have the strongest company he has ever had and will also have a repertoire of all new plays which will include "In The Shadow of the Guillotine," "The Mad Miser," "Sherlock Holmes," "The Ku-Klux Klan," "Shadows of a Great City," "Caught in the Web," "Jesse James," "The Prince of Detectives," "The Inside Track," "The Flower of the Ranch" and many others. In Mr. Kelley's support this season are such well-known people as Wilson R. Todd, Chas. Kendall, Edw. B. Rogers, Frances Stahall, Frank H. Cox, Roy Watson, J. C. Weston, H. C. Harvey, Miss Elenor Kendall, Cresc. Canada, Anna L. Marvin, Jane Keckley, Mare Marston, Besse Rosemont.

"In the Shadow of the Guillotine" will be the offering on Monday night which will be correctly staged with all special scenery and electrical and mechanical effects.

The engagement is for one week starting Monday, July 29th. Ladies will be admitted free on the opening night if seats are reserved before 6 p. m. on Monday, July 29th.

It is shown that the State of Kentucky is not only the largest producer of flour spar in the United States, but one of the largest producers in the whole world, and that it is rapidly coming to be one of the important producers of barytes.

The Democratic administration is not only keeping up Kentucky's reputation for law enforcement and preservation of the rights of her citizens and those who come within her borders for the purpose of investing their money, but is looking along all lines to promote her best interests and keep her abreast of her sister States. Land in eastern Kentucky that ten years ago could be purchased for one dollar an acre is today worth and selling for ten dollars an acre. The State Agricultural Department, proceeding under Act of the General Assembly, has just arranged for a forest survey and forest map of Kentucky which will be of inestimable value to the timber interests of the State, and is taking steps to preserve the forests of Kentucky by tree planting. It has now an agent in a foreign country for the purpose of bringing to Kentucky a desirable class of immigrants to supply the growing demand for farm and household labor. Through its officials at Frankfort, and its representatives in the Assembly, it has its hand on the pulse of the people of the State, feeling what they most need and desire, and supplying as quickly as possible those needs. It has restored confidence among foreign investors, saying to them to come to Kentucky where the minerals are rich and you will be protected in your lives and in your property, and, under proper laws, enrich yourselves while developing the State and benefiting our people. With such confidence restored, the financial condition of the State better than ever before in its history, its public charitable and penal institutions most capable managed, and a new Kentucky Capital raising its magnificent dome in historic old Frankfort without adding a cent to the tax rate or debt, why should the people listen to the carping of a lot of politicians of the W. O. Bradley stripe, who, when in convention assembled at Louisville a few weeks ago "straddled" on the one live issue of the campaign, temperance and observance of the Sabbath by the liquor sellers.

Republican Defeat Predicted.

John S. Wise, one of the most eminent Southern Republicans but now residing in New York, made an address lately before the Maryland Bar Association in "Centralization by Construction." He said President Roosevelt's attempt to broaden Federal power by interpretation is to make an "Indian-rubber Constitution" and declared that the doctrine of Federal power, increased by construction under the plea of changed condition, is the most insidious and dangerous heresy brought before the people of America. But John S. Wise belongs to the old Lincoln school of politics that is entirely out-run by the strenuous type of Republicans of today. The speeches of President Roosevelt, said Mr. Wise, indicate a singular ignorance of the boundary line between Federal and State powers and he predicted that the people would not uphold a party which advocated Federal or State aggression.

Republicans who think as Mr. Wise does must needs come over to the Democracy and will undoubtedly do so if wisdom is shown in platform declarations and selection of candidates.

All Republicans are not grafters, but about all the grafters are Republicans, who have doubtless been induced to become such by the corrupting systems of protective tariffs and subsidies.

"The times are too good for my purse," writes a level-headed poet. To the average man, here is truth and poetry combined. The times are indeed so good that a man of moderate means can scarcely get a square meal, without paying half his income in tariff profits to the trusts.

And now Mr. Hull, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, has joined the war-criers. He declares the people of this country could carry on a big war and get rich faster than ever. As a get-rich-quick scheme this Hull proposition beats the Republican post-office and land frauds out of sight.

From Our Special Correspondent

Washington, D. C., July 18, 1907.—

Since saying last week that means were being used to round up the Federal officials for Secretary Cortelyou for the Republican nomination for President, further evidence has come to light that the scheme is working. Congressman Jesse Overstreet declared, a few days ago, that the delegation from New York is fixed for Cortelyou, but as Mr. Overstreet is a Fairbanks man he may have joined in exposing the Cortelyou conspiracy on purpose to embarrass President Roosevelt, for he said he did not expect to see Mr. Cortelyou nominated. Then along comes Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, fresh from political conferences in New York with this Wall Street railroad friends and declares: "Cortelyou will undoubtedly have the support of the New York delegation. And you know what that means." With Overstreet and Elkins enlisted for him and the corporation money ready to be poured out for him, Mr. Cortelyou will make a typical Republican candidate.

Only one new candidate has developed for the Democratic nomination during the past week, and he has not yet reached the newspaper stage, but I am assured by an Illinois editor, a friend of Mr. Bryan, that former Governor Francis will be a candidate. As he has always been a consistent Democrat and chiefly supplied the funds to carry Missouri for Mr. Bryan in 1896, he must be seriously considered as one to be reckoned with when the convention decides that crucial question for the Democracy.

Here in Washington President Roosevelt's Napoleonic move of massing in the Pacific the greatest flotilla of battleships ever assembled in any waters has prematurely revealed a plan whose political purpose is as plain as day. In withdrawing his first denial that any such intention was entertained, the President from Oyster Bay issued, through Loch, a second statement to the effect that it was not the intention of the Government to send this fleet of battleships to the Pacific "at once." Of course they are not to be sent at once. The purpose of sending them being purely political, the movement will be reserved until late in the year 1907, and during the whole of the year 1908, until after election in November. Those who study the situation and look beyond the mere day, know that the present dynasty has decided that something must be done to distract public attention from our over-discussed domestic conditions. They have been talked to death, all except the tariff and as that will not down, it is necessary to divert public attention from it. What more pregnant topic for debate, or the development of mob heat, than the fact that you have a neighbor on your border acting suspiciously, so suspiciously that it is necessary for you to maintain at the danger point the greatest flotilla of battleships ever brought together in time of peace. When this debate is on, which Mr. Roosevelt is obviously preparing for, no eloquence, however great, will be strong enough to fix public attention upon the revision of schedules or the discussion of any domestic political abuse.

Considering how personally-profitable foreign wars have been in the career of the late Police Commissioner of New York, one need not wonder at the evidence of the preparations now being made to jingo a successor to Mr. Roosevelt into the Presidency in 1908.

Political Pick-Ups.

Judge Parker endorses the idea of a candidate from a Southern State, but declines to intimate who he favors. He says the South is full of men of presidential caliber.

It's all right now, Vice-President Fairbanks has squared himself on the cocktail matter by refusing one in Seattle and calling for lemonade.

We hear a great deal of Mr. Roosevelt's "policies," but unfortunately nobody ever says anything of his "principles." Has he no principles worth mentioning? Has he nothing broader or higher than a mere time-serving, shifting, many-colored "policy"? Is Mr. Roosevelt but an opportunist?

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. Beware of Benedicts!

By H. M. KERNER.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

The new Mrs. Wolcott regarded Billy Bevan distrustfully. Not until the train had pulled out and she had sent her newly acquired husband forward to the baggage car to remove excess baggage in the shape of white satin streamers from their trunks would she feel safe. Billy Bevan was only happy when playing practical jokes. He was happiest when his victims were bridal couples.

Suddenly Bevan snapped a handcuff upon her husband's wrist and was drawing the bride and groom together with a mocking "till death do thee part" when he felt the cold steel on his own wrist and heard the fatal click. He, not the bride, was handcuffed to Wolcott.

"I say," he cried protestingly, "this is not fair."

"You can unlock yourself in time to leave at the next station," said Wolcott. "It's poetic justice, Billy."

"It's confoundedly unpleasant," Billy retorted. "You see, I did not get the key; never supposed that I should need one. I just could see you going to the hotel and asking that a pitcher of ice water and a policeman be sent to your room."

"YOU WISH HIM RELEASED AT THE NEXT STATION?" ASKED THE MAGICIAN.

"This is the better joke," smiled Wolcott. "It will teach you that marriage is something sacred, not merely a peg upon which to hang fool jokes. Let's go ahead to the smoking car. We will be less conspicuous there than here."

Arm in arm they made their way to the cafe car, but once there Wolcott dropped Bevan's wrist and let the cuff show.

They immediately became the center of attention. One man, more curious than the rest, turned to Wolcott. "Your prisoner?" he asked. The bridegroom regarded Bevan with a benevolent smile.

"He is a prisoner of his own making," Wolcott explained. "The jail yawns for him, but it is more likely to be the insane asylum that finally comes into its own."

"I see," grinned the questioner. "You're that bridal couple three cars back."

"I am part of that happy pair," conceded Wolcott, "but this is not the partner of my joys and sorrows. He simply shares my sorrows at the present time."

"You're a sharer all right," agreed Bevan with a chuckle. "There's some consolation in that. Think of poor Bess back there in the chair car all alone."

"She would rather be rid of us," said Wolcott comfortably. "It is all your own fault, Billy. I begged you not to try any of your fool tricks. Beware of the benedicts, Billy. They will all pay you back some day when your neck goes under the matrimonial yoke."

"The lady says to come on back and bring your friend," reported the white coated porter. "There's a seat next yours he can get."

Bevan's eyes snapped. He could make things interesting back in the chair car. But his amiable intention to turn the joke on his involuntary host was checked, for a dapper little man stepped forward.

"Permit me," he said. "I am a handcuff magician. I can take those off if you wish."

"Then he'll go ranting through the train," said Wolcott. "I'd rather have him where I can watch him."

"No, it will be all right," said the magician as he drew a handkerchief over the cuffs. A click and Wolcott withdrew his hand, rubbing his chafed wrist. Bevan attempted to do the same, but when the handcuff king removed the cloth it was seen that the cuff had been slipped around the arm of Bevan's chair.

"You wish him released at the next station?" asked the magician.

"Better carry him to Presby," said Wolcott. "He has some friends there."

Bevan groaned. Grace Coburn lived at Presby. If any one should detect his plight and tell her—He shook his free fist after Wolcott's retreating form.

At Presby, Wolcott came up just as the first cuff was unfastened from the chair.

"Let him keep the other," he suggested. "He seems so fond of them. It would be a shame to remove them."

"Quite so," agreed the magician. "Monsieur is too fond of a joke to let this terminate so abruptly? Is it not so?"

"Give my regards to Grace in case you see her," called Wolcott as Bevan made for the door. Bevan breathed a prayer that he would not see her, but as he stepped to the platform she came toward him with sparkling eyes.

"Why didn't you let us know that you were coming?" she cried as she shook hands.

"I didn't know it myself," he explained. "You see, I was carried off while I was saying goodbye to Ted Wolcott and Bess, so I came on for a call."

"I'm glad you did," she said smilingly. "It's too bad I did not know that Bess was on the train. I came to see May Lewis off. Oh, have you hurt your wrist, Billy?"

"A little," he admitted lamely, scowling at the handkerchief bandage around the offending cuffs. "I'll tell you about it as we drive out."

He followed her over to the dog-cart.

"That was very careless," she scolded. "You must have hurt your wrist. It's not my wrist that hurts; it's my feelings," he began. When he had explained his plight he added, "Bert was hoping you would be here to see me—and you were," he ended miserably.

"Are you sorry that I was?" she demanded.

"Sorry? Not a bit of it, only a man feels such a fool."

"If you ever marry what a lot of back scores there will be to be paid off."

"Yes, Ted was telling me to beware of the benedicts. No girl would want to marry a man that will get the send-off that's in preparation for me."

"She would not care very much for you if she could not stand a little teasing for your sake," she said softly.

"A little teasing?" he echoed. "Why, they are liable to wreck the train to get square. How would you like—"

"There's a blacksmith shop just ahead," she said hurriedly to change the topic. "I guess he could cut that cuff."

The blacksmith could and did.

"That lets you out of a scrape," Grace said when they were under way again.

"Only to get into a greater one," he declared. "I—well, I've been trying for months to get up my courage to ask you to marry me, dear. I think you know that I love you. I know that you love me or you would have joked me about the scrape I was in. Do you think, dear, that you love me enough to say 'Yes?'"

"I think I can brave even the benedicts," she answered shyly.

Physical Horrors Not Art.

The subject of discussion at the Impressionists' club was a picture, "Circe's Swine," by a young German painter, a grotesque study showing the enchantress among a herd of bestial things, variously diverging from the human type—furry eared fauns, shaggy hipped satyrs, apes with pink palms, snuffling jackals and thick jowled swine—all with more or less of agonized human intelligence protesting mutely from their hideous lineaments.

"They are all errors, these freakish excesses," declared an old painter of the second empire. "Triboulet, Quasimodo, Gwynplaine, have no proper place in art. Such art belongs to the Huns and Iroquois, who could only be stirred by laceration and dismemberment. The only effects of horror properly within the province of the artist are psychological. Everything else is a mere matter of the abattoir. The body as nature has evolved it is sanctified by her purpose, in any natural function or attitude decent and comely. But lop away so much as a finger and you have wounded the creature beyond repairation."—Willa Sibert Cather in McClure's.

Indian Bug Eaters.

A reporter went over into the Indian Territory and ate locusts with the full bloods. He says: "The insects are caught at night just before they are strong enough to fly away. The Indians select a smooth spot of ground where they have ascertained that the grubs are plentiful and clean it off nicely. When it is dark they go to the place thus prepared with torches and beat the ground with a maul or jump up and down on it, with the result that the young locusts swarm out and are swept into bags and baskets, where they are salted, put in an oven and browned. Impelled by curiosity, the writer took a helping of the suspicious looking bugs and bit gingerly a plump one in the middle and then ate the whole bug and helped himself to more, for he found that the locust was not a bad tasting bug at all. It has a flavor somewhat like that of a dried herring or salted peanuts, and the crisp, brown bugs make very good eating."—Joplin (Mo.) News-Herald.

Character in the Eyes.

Character reading from the features is an interesting study in which most people indulge, though perhaps unconsciously. A man is heard frequently to remark that he never judges a person by external appearances, but let a person apply to this same man for a position and the first thing he will do will be to make a mental estimate of the character, ability and general condition of the applicant. And he does this from outward appearances entirely. When a man applies for a job, look at his eyes. More signs of character are expressed through the eyes than any other feature. The eye is the window to the brain, and through it an expert character reader can often see many a tale that would be lost to the average person. A guilty eye has sent more than one criminal to meet his fate, and a steady, unflinching one has helped many a man through a serious difficulty.—Frequent.

EARLY ARITHMETICS.

Struggles of the Pilgrim Children With One of the "R's."

Next to penmanship the colonial school and schoolmaster took firm stand on "ciphering." "The Bible and figners is what I want my boys to know," said the old farmer. I have examined with care a Wingate's Arithmetic which was used for over a century in the Winslow family in Massachusetts. The first edition was printed in 1620. It is certainly bewildering to a modern reader. "Pythagoras—His Table" is of course our multiplication table. Then come "The Rule of Three," "The Double Golden Rule," "The Rule of Fellowship," "The Rule of False," etc., ending with "a collection of pleasant and polite questions to exercise all the parts of vulgar arithmetic."

Wingate's Arithmetic and Hodder's Arithmetic were succeeded by Pike's Arithmetic. This had 363 rules to be committed to memory, and not an explanation was given of one of them. It is the most barren schoolbook I have ever read. These printed arithmetics were not in common use. Nearly all teachers had manuscript "sum books," from which the scholars copied page after page of "sums," too often without any explanation of the process, though there were also many and long rules, which helped the penmanship if they did not the mathematics.—Exchange.

BARBED WIRE.

A Lucky Device That Brought Millions to Its Inventor.

"The luckiest invention in history," said a patent official, "was that of barbed wire. It came about by accident."

"Isaac L. Ellwood was the inventor of barbed wire. In his youth he lived in De Kalb, Ill., and, having a neighbor whose pigs trespassed on his garden, he put up one day a wire fence of his own make. This fence had barbs and points on it. It was queer and ugly, but it kept out the pigs."

"It was a real barbed wire fence, the first in the world, and there were millions of money in it, but young Ellwood and his friends laughed at its freak appearance."

"One day two strangers saw this fence, perceived how well it kept out the pigs, realized how cheap it was—realized, in a word, its value—and ordered several tons of it from Ellwood. Furthermore, they contracted to sell for a term of years all the barbed wire he could produce."

"Ellwood borrowed $1,000 and set up a little factory. A few years later on he had paid back that loan and was worth a small matter of $15,000,000 besides."—New York Press.

The Water Lily.

Almost everybody has observed the strange characteristic of the water lily bud opening its petals at sunrise and closing them again at sunset. It was for this reason mainly that the ancients held the water lily sacred to the sun. Pliny says: "It is reported that in the Emphrates the flower of the lotus plunges into the water at night, remaining there till midnight and to such a depth that it cannot be reached with the hand. After midnight it begins gradually to rise, and as the sun rises above the horizon the flower also rises above the water, expands and raises itself some distance above the element in which it grows." It was also through this peculiarity that Hancarville proved that the Egyptians considered the lily an emblem of the world as it rose from the waters of the deep.

Scot Free.

The expression "scot free," which is in use every day, harks back to the times of Scottish romance and tragedy so luminously described by Sir Walter Scott in "The Antiquary" and "Rob Roy." In these stirring tales we are told of one form of Scottish trials given certain offenders of justice. He who had broken the law was divested of all of his clothing and placed at a certain distance from archers who had bows and arrows ready, waiting the command, "Fire." When the command was given, the man under indictment would begin running and the archers firing, and if in running this gantlet none of the arrows hit him he was allowed to go scot free.—Exchange.

A Real Genius.

From the composers of all time Beethoven stands out by himself like some gigantic tree towering up above the rest of the forest. He was the greatest genius of all, not for any one thing that he did, but because he was equally great in every style of music that he essayed. The first test of real genius is the ability to excel in all directions, and for this reason I have always looked upon Beethoven, Shakespeare and Turner as the three greatest geniuses who have ever existed.—Emil Sauer in Strand Magazine.

Just His Luck.

"Hello," said Borem, "I just thought I'd drop in on you today to—"

"I thought you would, too," interrupted Merchant.

"You did? Now, that's strange, because—"

"Not at all. This is the busiest day I've had for two weeks."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A BUSINESS PARABLE.

You Cannot Fail to Appreciate the Point in This Story.

Once a farmer had 1,800 bushels of wheat, which he sold not to a single grain merchant, but to 1,800 different dealers, a bushel each. A few of them paid him in cash, but far the greater number said it was not convenient then; they would pay later. A few months passed and the man's bank account ran low. "How is this?" he said. "My 1,800 bushels of grain should have kept me in affluence until another crop is raised, but I have parted with the grain and have instead only a vast number of accounts, so small and scattered that I cannot get around and collect fast enough to pay expenses."

So he posted up a public notice and asked all those who owed him to pay quickly. But few came. The rest said, "Mine is only a small matter, and I will go and pay one of these days," forgetting that, though each account was very small, when all were put together they meant a large sum to the man. Things went on thus. The man got to feeling so bad that he fell out of bed and awoke, and, running to his granary, found his 1,800 bushels of wheat still safe there. He had only been dreaming.

Moral.—The next day the man went to the publisher of his paper and said: "Here, sir, is the pay for your paper, and when next year's subscription is due you can depend on me to pay it promptly. I stood in the position of an editor last night, and I know how it feels to have one's honestly earned money scattered all over the country in small amounts."—Exchange.

GOLDSMITH'S POVERTY.

Wretched Misery of the Amiable but Imprudent Author.

In 1758, two years after Goldsmith returned from his wanderings on the continent, he presented himself at Surgeons' hall for examination as a hospital mate, with the view of entering the army or navy; but he suffered the mortification of being rejected as unqualified. That he might appear before the examining surgeon suitably dressed Goldsmith obtained a new suit of clothes, for which Griffiths, the publisher of the Monthly Review, became security. The clothes were to be returned immediately when the purpose was served, or the debt was to be discharged. Poor Goldsmith, having failed in his object and probably distressed by urgent want, pawned the clothes. The publisher threatened, and Goldsmith replied:

"I know of no misery but a jail, to which my own imprudence and your letter seem to point. I have seen it inevitable these three or four weeks and, by heavens, request it as a favor—a favor that may prevent something more fatal. I have been some years struggling with a wretched being, with all that contempt and indignance bring with it, with all those strong passions which make contentment insupportable. What, then, has a jail that is formidable?"

Such was the hopelessness, the deep despair of this imprudent but amiable author who has added to the delight of millions and to the glory of English literature.

Some Bulls.

Last year, in the north of Ireland, the following came under my observation. In a hotel the porter, for my information and dutifully in furtherance of the interests of his employers, remarked, "If you want a drive, sir, you needn't go out of the hotel," meaning, of course, that carriages formed part of the establishment.

Another bull was in a conversation overheard between two workmen. One put the question, "Were you acquainted with So-and-so?" to which the reply was, "No; he was dead before I knew him."

An Irish friend of mine was describing a dinner party he had been at. It was a great success, as two noted talkers were present, each of whom was talking so fast that neither could get in a word.—London Spectator.

Equal to the Occasion.

The Countess Waldegrave was married four times. One evening she appeared at the opera in Dublin during her fourth husband's occupancy of the post of chief secretary for Ireland. An audacious Celt, catching sight of her ladyship in one of the boxes, shouted out with real Irish temerity, "Lady Waldegrave, which of the four did you like best?"

The countess was equal to the occasion. Without a moment's hesitation she rose from her seat and exclaimed enthusiastically, "Why, the fifthman, of course!"—a remark which naturally "brought down the house."

Suggestive.

"Hang it!" growled young Lovett to the girl of his heart. "It makes me mad every time I think of that money I lost today. I certainly feel as if I'd like to have somebody kick me!"

"By the way, Jack," said the dear girl dreamily, "don't you think you'd better speak to father this evening?"—Illustrated Bits.

Just Two Kinds of Men.

"There are two classes of men," said the close observer. "One knows nothing about woman, having spent years in studying her. The other knows everything, never having studied her."—Chicago Journal.

Terrible Railroad Accident.

Thirty excursionist were killed and 100 were injured, many of them fatally, when a Pere Marquette excursion train of eleven coaches from Ionia, Mich., carrying nearly 1,000 employees of the Pere Marquette shops there and their families, was run into by a local freight train at Washburn crossing, about two miles east of Salem. The first three coaches in the long excursion train were telescoped and it was in the smoking car which headed the train, that the greatest loss of life occurred. Three more cars after those which were telescoped were wrecked by the collision.

Test Of County Patriotism.

The counties of Kentucky are to have an opportunity of contesting with each other for a handsome prize at the Kentucky State Fair to be held in Louisville under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture, September 16-21. Commissioner of Agriculture Hubert Vreeland has tendered to the State Board on appropriation to cover the purchase of a $200 Sterling silver plate to be awarded to that county whose exhibitors at the forthcoming exhibition, carry off the largest number of ribbons in all classifications.

This is something unique in the history of State Fairs, and it is expected to attract a great deal of attention. It is possible for every county in the State to have a good chance of winning this award. A ribbon received in any department will count for as much as the ribbon cut goes with the premium of these hundreds of dollars involved, therefore the county which exhibits much fruit, will line up with the county that has the greatest live stock display, while the county which makes a good showing in field seed and grain, with vegetables and melons, will stand as good a chance as that county that shows most poultry and pigeons or the greatest amount of woman's work and table luxuries.

It is to be a free for all, with an even chance for every county in the State. The silver plate will be handsomely engraved, framed in gold with a background of velvet, and, for the first three months after the Fair, will be placed in the custody of the County Judge of the county which wins it. To be hung upon the walls of the court house; to be removed on January 1st and placed in the Capitol at Frankfort. The three months display in the county court house will enable every citizen of the county to examine it, while after it is hung on the walls of the Capitol, every visitor to the Capitol will see the trophy and be impressed with the importance of the county winning it. When the new Capitol is completed, the silver plate will be removed to it, and as succeeding Fairs are held, the trophies won by other counties will be placed alongside the first. Full information will be furnished to any citizen of the State who will address the Secretary, R. E. Hughes, at Louisville.

No Gambling.

No gambling will be allowed at the big Blue Grass Fair, to be held at Lexington, the week of August 12th to 17th. The Board of Directors have declined an offer of $10,000 for the gambling privileges of that week and have also declined sufficient guarantee for bookmakers, who desire to make book in case running races are put on, to pay the cost of the purses and to leave a goodly sum besides. The Blue Grass Fair instituted the absolute rule last year of allowing no gambling on its grounds and it will live up to that rule, even at the cost of what could be made great revenue. This is a position which will meet with and which merits the commendation of the people of the whole of Central Kentucky.

Our Debt to Ancient Greece.

Greece and Rome were at the opposite poles of the human world, and equally opposite are their influences upon modern times. Rome was practical, hard headed, juristic, while Greece was intellectual, emotional, artistic, abounding in what may be called the forebrain versus the brain behind the ears. Rome's empire was lengthy, material, matter of fact, while Greece banked on the intellectual and spiritual, finding her greatest conquests in the realm of mind rather than in that of matter. Rome produced no great original thinker, her greatest men shining like the moon, by borrowed light—light reflected from the sages of Athens. Rome taught men law, order, obedience, but the mother of ideas and sentiments was Greece. From the Eternal City we have inherited our jurisprudence, but it is from the City of the Violet Crown that we have derived our art, science and philosophy. In a word, to quote the substance of Dr. Johnson's saying, eliminate from our modern civilization all that it owes to Greece and the residue would be barbarism.—New York American.

Best Site For Public Building Turned Down By Government.

In turning down the offer of Mr. J. T. Hinton to sell the Government the old Christian church property for the new Federal Building, the Government has simply refused the best site, and, in fact, the only real practical site that has been offered. It is near the passenger depot, it is by government survey, the center of Paris, it is at the intersection of the rural routes and in every way the most desirable site for the building, and is cheap property at $8,900, considering what the surrounding property has been selling for recently.

The ground offered to the Government as a site embraces the property of the old church, 66-2-3 feet on Main, and extending one hundred and thirty feet on Eighth street, and the adjoining property of Martin Doyle, fronting on Main fifty feet, or an aggregate width on that thoroughfare of one hundred and sixteen and two third feet. Mr. Hinton recently purchased of the Vincennes heirs the property in the rear of the Doyle lot fronting on High street, for two thousand seven hundred dollars, and from the rear of this must be taken a sufficiently number of feet to equalize the Doyle property in length with that of the church property. Out of the total of $8,900 asked for the site Mr. Doyle would receive $2,500, leaving a balance for the church property of only $6,400, from which must be subtracted $700 for the part cut off from the Vincennes property, leaving a net valuation or the church property of $5,700. Mr. Hinton paid $5,000 cash for the church property and many times could have sold it for a handsome profit.

Our citizens in general are up in arms at the Government's turning this site down at the very last minute. Paris is rapidly growing South and it would not be at all practical for the building to be farther North than Eighth street, or on any other street but Main. The citizens of our city should be considered in this matter, we think, and the Government will be asked to reconsider.

The old church property at the corner of Eighth and Main streets is in one square of the opera house and library, five blocks of the Louisville & Nashville depot and will be within one square of a new and modern hotel now contemplated. Its location there means the erection at once of several fine business blocks and a big growth and expansion of numerous enterprises now contemplated.

There is no question about this being the most desirable site, not only for the Government, but for residents and business men. It is truly hoped that politics will not cut a figure in this matter, as it has been intimated, and a desirable site to almost every citizen be turned down for one undesirable in any view you take of it.

Was It The President's Dog.

Dr. Washburn, of St. John's Episcopal church, who is President Roosevelt's summer pastor, at Oyster Bay, made it plain Sunday that he proposed to take no part in any nature-faking competition. When he saw that the main point in his sermon was likely to be misconstrued by his congregation because of the interest displayed in the presence of a friendly little dog, he stopped short. He would repeat what he had said after the dog had been ejected, he announced, but first he wished to insist that no member of his flock should hereafter bring their pet dogs to the church.

President Roosevelt and his family attended the services.

Negro Slashes Another With Razor.

About 1 o'clock Sunday morning Newton Allen slashed Ike Fretwell several times with a razor, laying bare a deep gash in Fretwell's throat which nearly severed the windpipe, besides several deep cuts in the chest and side. Both men are negroes. Fretwell is a porter at the saloon of T. S. Steadman, and resides in Newtown, a negro suburb of the city. His wife recently fell down a pair of steps, breaking several ribs and suffering internal injuries.

Shortly after Fretwell arrived at his home the Allen negro, who was drunk, was making a loud noise in the neighborhood. He called at Fretwell's home and the latter asked him to go away. This Allen refused to do, when Fretwell undertook to put him off of the premises with the above result. Allen escaped, but was later located and placed in jail by Chief of Police Hill. Fretwell, it is thought, cannot recover.

Paris Firms Have a Corner on Bluegrass Seed.

E. F. Spears & Sons and J. Simms Wilson, of this city, Gay & Prewitt, of Winchester, and a Mt. Sterling firm, have secured a corner, you might say, on all of the genuine bluegrass seed in the world.

They closed a deal Saturday with the Blue Grass Seed Growers' Association of the American Society of Equity, whereby they purchased 200,000 bushels of pooled seed for 93 cents per bushel. They also purchased a large number of bushels from R. B. Hutchcraft at 92 cents, and all unsold seed C. S. Brent & Bro. had on hand at 95 cents.

Purchases from private parties by this syndicate in the last few days amount to over 400,000 bushels, for which they paid $1 per bushel for a lot of it.

Stuart & O'Brien are the only dealers here who did not sell to them and who are still holding the seed for better prices. They have about all the seed in the county that the syndicate has not purchased.

This is the biggest deal in bluegrass seed ever made in the bluegrass country and gives these men a sure enough corner on this crop.

The business men give a cash premium of $175 for the best harness stallion, mare or gelding, divided in three parts—$100, $50, $25.

Professional men offer a cash premium of $75 for the best saddle mare or gelding of any age.

These special premiums will no doubt bring a larger and better display of fine horses.

Compliments Prof. Chapman.

The Beattyville Enterprise has the following to say of Prof. G. W. Chapman, Superintendent of the Paris City Schools:

"The Teachers' Institute which was in session last week was one of the best ever held in Lee county, and was a success in every way."

"Prof. G. W. Chapman, Superintendent of city schools in Paris, Ky., was the instructor. This was Prof. Chapman's third consecutive year as instructor here, which speaks well for his popularity with our teachers and for his ability."

The following is one of the resolutions adopted by the Institute:

"Second: That Supt. R. T. Eager, has been faithful in his duties and has shown wisdom in the selection, for the third time, of Prof. G. W. Chapman, of Paris, Kentucky, who has shown his ability and management, and we thank him for the kind and tireless manner in which he has instructed us and feel that this Institute has been a success, and we also heartily endorse him as an able and worthy instructor and a man worthy to be imitated."

What Mitchell Says:

It has been my policy in the past to make the very best cold drinks and ices that can be made.

My present business is a demonstration of the fact that the people have appreciated my efforts.

I don't claim to make better drinks and better frozen goods than other merchants—I leave that for you to say—but what I do say is this: you can at all times get a Soda, Sundae, Phosphate or any soda fountain drink at my store that is just exactly as it should be.

A Railroad Detour.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1906, by Frank H. Sweet.

THE Honduras has arrived two days earlier than expected. Report at once. You will take twenty cars over the N. I. and N., via St. Louis, to Cincinnati, where you will leave ten as per instructions which will be handed you, and then go on with the rest to Chicago.

The order was addressed to "Messenger 17," and the office boy who delivered it knew that 17 meant Carl Reuter of Rue Citrouille.

But Carl Reuter was just recovering from a severe attack of the grip, brought on by exposure while delivering fifteen cars of bananas over the L. and N. to Atlanta ten days before. A sudden blizzard had swept down upon them from the northwest, stalling the train with packed snow and lowering the thermometer 40 degrees in twice that many minutes. The cars had been warmed as usual before leaving New Orleans, with the expectation that the great mass of moist fruit would generate enough heat of itself for later warmth. But the change had come too soon and been too great, and in saving the fruit under his care Messenger 17 had neglected to take care of himself. He had got back to New Orleans, made his report, been complimented on setting his fruit through the blizzard in good condition and then had hurried home and to bed.

No steamer had come in since, and the Honduras was two days ahead of her time. Moreover, Carl was not a man who cared to share his personal matters with the public. Even his illness was his own. So it happened that the company had not heard.

But twenty minutes after the order came Carl Reuter, aged nineteen, was hurrying into the office on the company's wharf. A new man was at the desk.

"Seventeen, sir," began Carl when the man, whose eyes were running down a page of a ledger before him, interrupted with:

"Oh, yes, I see, 17. You are Carl Reuter?"

"Yes, sir. My father?"

But the man was pushing an envelope toward him.

"There's your instructions. Now hurry. You're a younger man than I imagined from what I have heard of you. But sometimes young men do fully as good work as the older ones. No, no," as Carl tried to speak, "there's no time for talk now. Your cars are nearly ready. I expect. We've half a thousand men down there emptying the steamer and loading the cars. The Honduras brought in the largest and best lot we ever had, and they're going to be rushed through to market. The agent told me to tell you messengers to be especially vigilant with your thermometers on this trip. Have them open or retard the bananas so they will reach market in exactly the right condition. But of course you understand all this."

"Of course," Carl assented mechanically. Then, with evident anxiety, "My father is?"

"Never mind your father now," briskly. "You may tell me about him when you come back. Your train is on the wharf, track 3, forty cars, twenty of which will be in charge of Messenger 9, who will switch off at Corinth for Memphis. Get your section heated as rapidly as possible and then remove the covers. By the time you're through the train will be ready to pull out. I think. Hurry! Oh, here's Messenger 9 now."

A heavily bearded man stopped at the desk and took the envelope which was handed him and then listened to the same advice Carl had been given. Carl lingered, apparently hoping for a chance to finish what he had commenced to say, but more messengers were hurrying into the office, and the man at the desk motioned imperatively toward the wharf.

"Hurry along, 17," he ordered. From what I've been told I suppose you to be one of the best men we have, but you mustn't loiter like that. You haven't any time to waste in getting your section ready."

Carl's lips tightened suddenly, and he walked rapidly down the wharf, overtaking the heavily bearded man as he was crossing in front of two puffing engines to track 3. The man looked at him and nodded.

"Where's your father, Carl?" he asked. "Seems he and I are to be on the same train this time, at least as far as Corinth. I couldn't ask a better man on a rush trip like this is going to be."

"Father's sick," answered Carl. "I came down to see to get his place. I've been watching him the last four or five nights, sleeping a little when I could, but he's well enough now to look after himself until I get back."

"Sick?" with some surprise. "Why, I hadn't heard. And you're to take his place on this trip? Ain't you pretty young?"

"I wouldn't have thought the company'd agree to it, they're so particular, though," hastily, "you're perfectly competent, Carl. I know that. You've been with your father so many trips you know the ropes as well as he. And you've got a cool, clear head. That's what counts in ripening fruit by thermometers. And still—well, you know yourself how the company is about young help. I've got a boy of your age that I hope to get into a messenger's job some day, but I've never expected to till he was twenty-five or more. You're lucky; that's all I've got to say. If you make this trip all right, you'll be on the books for steady runs before the year's out."

Carl's face had grown hot and uncomfortable.

"You don't understand," he explained. "I—"

But a man down the track was looking toward them and motioning. Messenger 9 hurried away.

"Well, I hope you'll have good luck, as, of course, you will," he called back over his shoulder. "We'll be too busy to see much of each other on the trip. I take the twenty end cars on account of switching off at Corinth. Yours'll be forward."

Until that moment Carl's head had been in a whirl. Events had followed each other so rapidly, so apparently beyond his personal option in the matter, that he had allowed himself to be borne on the current. Now he decided to let it go on. He had hurried down to explain about his father and to see if he would not be allowed to fill the place. But from what he knew himself and from what 9 had just said he realized how slight was the chance. Perhaps even his father would be suspended for a time. The company did not make much allowance for sickness or convalescence. Their work was too important.

But, as 9 had conceded, he understood the work and could probably do it just as well as his father, and just now they were in special need of employment. His younger brother was in the hospital waiting an operation, and money must be had to meet the expenses.

So he hurried down track 3 to the end of his—or rather his father's—section of the train and began a careful examination of the cars. Then he set about seeing that they were properly treated. The mercury was down to 34 degrees, which was unusually cold for New Orleans, and 12 degrees lower than the messengers had started out at any previous time during the winter. Other messengers were giving their cars a little more heat than common, for it would be twelve to fifteen hours before the now cool bananas could begin to generate warmth of their own, and the freezing or even chilling of a train load would mean the loss of a fortune. Carl gave his cars several degrees more than was customary and then had the stoves removed and the doors closed. Even with an outside low temperature the carefully built cars would then retain heat until the fruit began to generate some of its own. An hour later the train pulled out.

A cold wave had been predicted, but apparently some weather condition had stayed or swerved it in another direction. Before they were beyond the city limits the mercury commenced to rise, and when they rumbled through Meridian it marked 60 degrees and continued to go up.

Carl began to look anxious. All his ventilators were now wide open, but the air in the cars was moist and stifling. Instead of being chilled, the danger was now that the bananas would overheat, which would be just as disastrous.

A messenger's duty is to see that his fruit gets into market in just the right condition. He must retard or advance the ripening by cold or heat, according to the condition of the fruit, the length of the trip and other circumstances. He must know from a mere glance at a bunch of bananas how many degrees of heat will be required to ripen it in a prescribed number of hours, and if he be a good messenger he must be able to have his fruit in just the right condition when he reaches his destination, whether it be four days or fourteen. With refrigerator cars and ventilators it is comparatively easy during the summer to shift the thermometers to the requirements of the fruit, and even in winter, when it continues cold, there are the initial stoves and the generated warmth to depend upon, but when an unexpected hot wave confronts a messenger in midwinter he has little but the resource of his own ingenuity to count on. Such a problem was now facing Carl. When they pulled into Corinth the mercury was 70 degrees, and there was no air stirring. Another twenty-four hours like this and he would scarcely get his fruit to Cincinnati, much less Chicago.

Messenger 9 came to him as his section was being transferred to a train for Memphis. The weather report stated that it was 12 degrees warmer at Memphis than at Corinth, and 9 was looking perturbed. His market was only a short distance away now, but twelve more degrees meant an uncontrolled ripening of the fruit. It could not reach even that near market in prime condition, which was every messenger's ambition.

"I'm out and out sorry for you, Carl," said 9 sympathetically. "It's going to be tough on all the messengers with such a special lot of fruit, but you'll have it worst. They assigned your father to the long Chicago run because he has the name of being the best man on the road, but for that very reason it'll be worse on you, being your first trip. You'll likely get some seconds to Cincinnati, but I'm afraid the Chicago ten cars won't pay the running cost over the railroads—that is, unless it turns cold within a few hours."

But there was no prospect of its turning cold. A hurried consultation of the weather bureau at Corinth showed that three or four more days of warm weather were predicted. It was warm all along the road to Cincinnati. The only cool places in the country seemed to be in the mountains, about Chattanooga, up the Hudson and west in the Rockies. Messenger 9 advised him to take the responsibility of selling the fruit at Corinth for what it would bring. That would save the company its total loss and transportation charges.

Carl was not ready for that, however. The consultation of the weather reports had already given his quick brain another idea, daring, but entirely feasible, he thought. His cars would have to wait three hours at Corinth to connect with a freight which pulled out directly behind the through express north. Carl utilized the first forty minutes of these three hours in developing his plan. He went straight to the office of the Southern railway, whose branch ran from Corinth to Chattanooga and there connected with the N. I. and T. for Cincinnati and Chicago.

"Wish to run your cars over our road?" asked the division superintendent after listening to Carl's hurried request. "Yes, I reckon so. We'll couple them to the afternoon freight, which pulls out about dark. The morning freight leaves in half an hour, and there isn't time to connect you with that. Besides, the train already has thirty-four cars, as much as the engine can carry up grade."

"But that's the very train I want to couple to," urged Carl impetuously. "You forget that I have an engine. Why can't we put the two ahead? They'll pull fifty-four cars all right even up grade."

The superintendent nodded thoughtfully.

"Yes, that might do," he said. "In fact, I think it will do very well. There's considerable snow up Chattanooga way, and two engines can plow through it better than one. But we'll have to hustle if we get you connected, for the train must pull out on time. There's another follows it forty minutes later."

They did hustle, and when the train pulled out for Chattanooga Carl's twenty cars formed part of it. Besides having all the ventilators open, each car had its door rolled back to let in every whiff of air possible. At Decatur the thermometers indicated 45 degrees, at Stevenson 34 degrees. Carl closed all the doors and partly closed the ventilators of the cars destined for Cincinnati. He was willing they should have a few more degrees of heat now and believed that he saw the way to getting his fruit to both markets in prime condition. At Chattanooga the mercury registered 29 degrees, and all the ventilators were closed.

Eight days later Carl reported at the office on the company's wharf. The man at the desk listened to his explanation in grim silence, tapping the ledger with the head of his pencil occasionally.

"It's something very unusual," he said when Carl finished, "very unusual and—er—reprehensible, running our cars about the country in a wild way like that. Ordinarily it would mean dismissal from our service—permanent discharge—but—er," his face relaxing somewhat, "under the circumstances, and in view of the fact that you had the longest run and are the only messenger who got his fruit into market in prime condition, we will say no more about it except that we have put your name on our books for regular runs. I hope your father will be well enough to make his trip when the next boat comes in. We do not like to spare good men. And, oh, yes," as Carl was turning away, his eyes shining, "the cashier has a little recognition for you from the company. You may stop at his window as you go by."

CURIOUS DECEPTIONS.

The Way Our Senses Are Liable to Play Us False.

Our senses deceive us curiously at times. A flash of lightning lights up the ground for only one-millionth of a second, yet it seems to us to last ever so much longer. What happens is that the impression remains in the eye or the retina for about one-eighth of a second, or 124,000 times as long as the flash lasts. If on a dark night a train speeding along at sixty miles an hour is lit up by a lightning flash it appears stationary, yet in the eighth of a second during which we seem to see it the train travels eleven feet. But we really only see it during one-millionth of a second, and in that time it travels only one-hundredth of an inch.

When a man's leg is cut off, if the stump be irritated he feels the pain in his toes. This curious deception is the same as any one can practice on himself by striking his elbow on the table, when he feels the pain in his fingers. Of course in both cases the pain is felt in the brain.

We do not actually perceive different distances with the eye, but judge them from various indications. When our judgment is at fault we are deceived. If you see a person in a fog, for instance, he seems to be much bigger than usual. The same thing happens when you see men or cattle on the top of a hill against the horizon in twilight. In both cases you judge them to be farther away than they really are, and consequently they appear uncommonly large.

A STUBBORN LOVER.

He Lay Firm and Conquered the Bride's Close Fisted Father.

I remember, says a writer on Irish Life, the marriage of the daughter of a well-to-do shopkeeper in the town of Galway. The father of the bride was considered to be decidedly close fisted. The bridegroom, as well as I remember, was of a station somewhat superior to that of the family he proposed to ally himself with. The wedding day came, but when the bridal party assembled at the chapel the bridegroom failed to appear. After waiting long and vainly for the laggard the emissaries were dispatched to his abode to hasten his coming. They found him snugly ensconced in bed.

"Sorra foot do I stir out of this," said the prospective benedict, "unless the fortune's doubled."

For an hour and more intermediaries ran backward and forward between the chapel and the bridegroom's dwelling, striving to make terms, while the bride waited at the altar with such patience as she could muster. The bridegroom, however, stood, or rather lay, firm, and at last the father, unwilling that his daughter should be put to shame in the sight of all Galway by returning to her father's house unwed, gave way and promised to double the fortune as demanded, whereupon the bridegroom got up, dressed himself and went to church to be married.

Largest Crater on the Earth.

The volcano Aso-san, in southern Japan, on the island of Kiusiu, possesses the largest crater known on the earth. It is about fourteen miles across in one direction, by ten or eleven in the other, and is surrounded by walls of an average height of 200 feet. Although the volcano is still active, its eruptions consist only of ashes and dust. Indeed, a range of volcanic mountains, evidently of subsequent formation, extends directly across the old crater. In these particulars Aso-san resembles some of the craters of the moon, where a long history of successive and gradually enfeebled outbursts of volcanic force is graphically represented.

All He Could Think Of.

While driving along a country road a man saw the roof of a farmer's house ablaze. He gesticulated and called to the farmer's wife, who was calmly standing in the doorway:

"Hey, your house is afire!"
"What?" she bawled out.
"I say, your house is afire!"
"What did y' say? I'm a little deaf."
"Your house is afire!" again yelled the man at the top of his lungs.
"Oh, is that all?" calmly replied the woman.

"It's all I can think of just now," responded the man in a rather weak voice as he drove on.—Exchange.

Toad as Assistant Gardener.

By actual inspection of a big, fat toad's stomach it was found to contain not less than fifty large grapevine worms, fifty-five potato bugs, sixty sowbugs, forty angleworms and thirty cabbage worms, with, by way of seasoning, numerous flies and mosquitoes. Now multiply this, and I think you will appreciate the value of an army of toads on your premises, or any number required, according to the services that may reasonably be expected from one toad.—Suburban Life.

The Woman in Business.

She handed in a check payable to Susan H. Smith. The cashier, who was a German, noticed that she had indorsed it Susan Smith and gave it back with a polite "You haf forgotten the 'H.' Overcome with confusion, she murmured, "Excuse me," and wrote below the indorsement, "Age twenty-three."—Lippincott's.

The Diplomacy Of Ted....

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

Copyrighted, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"You see, I wouldn't mind it a bit if it were not for Uncle Halbert," Gwendolin answered seriously. "It isn't as though he had led an active business life, Bob. He has always been so seclusive; you know what I mean—he had lived by himself and for himself until mamma died and I came to live at the Maples. That is over fifteen years ago, and I know that if I were to marry and leave him all alone here it would break his heart."

"Forty-nine isn't old," interrupted Bob gloomily. "It isn't for most men, but it is for a man like Uncle Halbert." Gwendolin answered seriously. "It isn't as though he had led an active business life, Bob. He has always been so seclusive; you know what I mean—he had lived by himself and for himself until mamma died and I came to live at the Maples. That is over fifteen years ago, and I know that if I were to marry and leave him all alone here it would break his heart."

"Let him come with us," suggested Bob, walking up and down the strip of beach below the sand dune, where the figure in the blue cloak sat in solitary state. "It's a great climate out there. He'd like it all right as soon as he got accustomed to the change. Of course, it might come hard to an old man like that."

"You just said he wasn't old!" "Well, he's too old to cure one way or the other."

"Bob Daulton, how can you talk so heartlessly?" Daulton stopped short in his walking and faced the figure in blue, his hands deep in his pockets, his young face set and resolute. "Just because I want you for my wife," he said, "and any obstacle that stands in my way after you yourself have said yes has simply got to be overcome—that's why. I like Mr. Ruthford all right. He's a fine old fellow, but I don't see just why we should blight our whole life's happiness in order to insure his not getting lonesome. And he won't be. He has lots of neighbors."

"He hates neighbors," interposed Gwendolin sadly, her chin on her palms. "He has quarreled with the Lawrences over the greenhouses they built that spoil the view from the arbor, and he doesn't like the new people at Greystone a bit. He says they're too excitable."

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING, TED?" ASKED BOB.

"He did, did he?" laughed Bob. "Well, he must enjoy excitement a little himself. When I drove in to the postoffice yesterday, I saw him riding beside little Mrs. Ainslee in her red and black runabout. They were clipping along the post road to beat the band, and he didn't look worried a bit over any excitement."

"He was not riding for pleasure," said Gwendolin coldly. "Mrs. Ainslee's little boy Teddy was bitten by a snapping turtle, and uncle simply went with her to the doctor's. Teddy was with them."

"Well, he wasn't in evidence, and I didn't hear any moans of pain. The old boy and the widow seemed to be enjoying themselves all right. Anyway, that kid ought to be suppressed. He put one of those snapping turtles in with my terriers last week, and it didn't do a thing but nip Napoleon's ear and take a bite at Lady Gay's nose."

"What were the terriers doing?" Gwendolin's blue eyes lighted with quick merriment.

"Nothing except kly-ing. You can't take a grip on a turtle shell, and every time one would make a dash at the turtle's head it would draw it in. And Teddy thought it was great fun."

"So it was," approved the young woman on the sand dune. "I didn't know Teddy had so much sense of humor. That must be why Uncle Hal likes him. Generally he doesn't care for children a bit."

"Maybe Teddy would keep him from being lonesome, then, after we've gone to Denver." Bob waited an instant, then caught encouragement from the face above him and took the sand dune at four steps. "Gwen, darling, quit teasing and behave. It isn't a joke. It's our life's happiness at stake just because this old fossil wants your company. What do we care even if he cut you off without a cent? I'll have enough for two, and I'm not afraid of him. I'll go to him after dinner to-night and tell him the whole thing and let him sizzle!"

"You can't tell him anything, Mr. D."

ton," interrupted an interested, eager little voice from the other side of the dune. "He's coming over to our house for dinner. Why don't you tell him right now?"

Bob withdrew his arm hurriedly from its resting place, and Gwen plumed up some stray tumbled locks with fingers that trembled even while she laughed at the picture below them. Standing in the pool of water left by the tide in the rocks below was Teddy Ainslee. His short duck pants were rolled high about his bare tanned legs, and his face was intensely serious as he balanced a tin pail and toy rake in his hands and stared up at the two figures on the sand dune.

"What are you doing, Ted?" asked Bob impersonally. "Digging for clams?"

"Nope; crabs," returned Ted laconically. "Got five. Two's most dewl, though. Why don't you tell him right now? He's over there with mamma, over behind the clubhouse. They're sitting on the rocks, talking about our coming to live in his house. Say, I'm going to have a room all to myself, I says, and a pony, and a red boat, too. Aren't you glad I'm coming to live with you, Gwen?"

Gwendolin's hand closed over the strong one that reached for it, with a warm, close grip. For a moment her eyes met Bob's, swift, questioning, amazed, laughing, all in one quick, sweeping glance of understanding. Bob started to laugh aloud, but she checked him and bent toward the little figure standing in the water below.

"Teddy, I am glad, Teddy," she said very gently, very diplomatically. "But I don't know about it. When are you coming, dear?"

Teddy's gaze wandered musingly over the stretch of shore to where the clubhouse made a splash of green and white on the landscape. From where he stood he could see a white parasol, and down behind the cliffon ruffles on that parasol sat Mr. Ruthford and his mother.

"Just as soon as he's my papa," he told the two above him calmly. "I like him real well. He asked me if he could have mamma, and I told him I didn't mind. He used to know mamma a long time ago, and he liked her, then, but she liked me best. She doesn't any more, though. She likes him best, but I don't care. I told him maybe I'd marry you, Gwen."

"That was awfully sweet of you, Teddy, dear," began Gwendolin.

"Just so you wouldn't be lonesome, you know," Ted assured her, "because I s'pose maybe he used to like you best, too, and now he won't any more, 'cause he told mamma he liked her the bestest in the whole world."

"God bless you, Teddikin," murmured Bob thankfully. "I'll buy you a bear for this, six feet tall." "When are you coming to live with us, Teddy?" asked Gwendolin, her voice a little unsteady, her face flushed rosily. The big hand was crushing her own so that it hurt.

"Pretty soon," said Ted encouragingly. "That's why they made me come away now. They're talking it over. They're going to hurry up and get married before you find it out, so it won't be a sudden shock. That's what Mr. Ruthford said. I heard him tell mamma that they must avoid any sudden shock to Gwen's nerves. So they're going to run away and get married, and then he's going to break it to you."

Bob gave an explosive peal of joy and rolled over on the sand at Gwendolin's feet. But Gwendolin sat still, her eyes bright with happiness and hope ahead, her chin resting on one palm and her eyes filled with sudden tears.

"Don't you cry, Gwen," called up Teddy courageously. "I'll love you and keep you from being lonesome." Gwendolin laughed, a quick, breaking laugh of tears and happiness combined, and held out both hands to Bob. "Thanks, Teddy, dear, so much, but I don't think I'll be very lonesome. After—after poor Uncle Hal has broken the news to me I think I shall go to Denver."

Emperors of Japan.

Women played an important part in the early history of Japan. To a woman, the Empress Jingu, belongs the glory of the first conquest made by Japan, that of Korea, A. D. 201. Dressed as a man, she led her fleet over the unknown waters, across which she alone believed a country lay to the westward. "If we succeed," she said to her chiefs, "the glory will all be yours. I will be responsible for the infamy of a possible defeat." The Koreans laid their wealth at the feet of the conquerors, and the king swore that so long as the stars shone and water ran down hill Korea should be faithful to Japan. This achievement of the empress gave rise to the boast of the Japanese, "The arms of Japan shine beyond the seas." But the most important fruit of her victory was the introduction of Buddhism from Korea, as well as Asiatic art, science, medicine and literature. Jingu, however, was never actually proclaimed head of the empire. The first female ruler was Suiko, and since her time eight emperors have governed Japan, some of them with great wisdom.

The Genius of Ancient Greece.

An authority on old Greek history says, and in my opinion rightly, that the average intelligence of the assembled Athenian citizens was higher than that of our house of commons. No doubt the Athenian public was by no means so learned as we moderns are. They were ignorant of many sciences, of much history—in short, of a thousand results of civilization—but in civilization itself, in mental power, in quickness of comprehension, in correctness of taste, in accuracy of judgment, no modern nation, however well instructed, has been able to equal by labored accomplishments the inborn genius of the Greeks.—Maha's "Greece and the

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood, thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by enclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 623 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pills regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Business Preacher.

The city of Beatrice, Neb., has just opened a gas plant where fuel gas is manufactured from corn cobs, corn stalks and other farm refuse. The gas sells at $1.19 per 1,000 feet and is being used for illuminating and fuel. The plant cost $100,000. The franchise for lighting is held by Rev. Charles Easton, of Cleveland, O., who is John D. Rockefeller's pastor. Rockefeller is supposed to be behind the company.

The vegetable matter is placed in huge retorts and roasted for hours, the result being a splendid grade of illuminating gas. Possibly his pastor is following in John D.'s footsteps. At any rate it explains his defense of the oil magnate. Unless he looks out his business may carry him out of the straight and narrow way.

Largest Baby In The World.

Although only 19 months old, the child of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guttilla, of Springfield, O., weighs 65 pounds. It is considered one of the largest babies in the world. There are six children Guttilla family. All are of good size, but the baby is a monster. In spite of her great weight, the baby is able to walk alone.

Last week a representative of a museum company offered the parents $50 a week to exhibit the baby but the tempting offer was refused.

Will Breed Ponies.

James B. Haggins will add the breeding of Shetland ponies to the industries on his great Elmendorf farm near Lexington. On the 10,000 acres of Elmendorf Mr. Haggins already has the largest thoroughbred stud in the world and has recently embarked in the breeding of Shorthorn cattle and is now establishing a mammoth dairy.

Saturday C. H. Berryman, manager of Elmendorf, was notified that twenty-seven ponies, comprising six stallions and twenty-one mares, had arrived at Boston on the ship Consuelo, direct from Lerwick, the principal seaport of the Shetland Islands, and will be shipped by rail to Elmendorf immediately. There has been during recent years so strong a demand for the ponies of the Shetland Isles that they are now difficult to obtain in their native land, and Mr. Haggins is said to have paid a large sum for the choice herd which he purchased.

Indian Burying Ground.

An Indian burying ground has probably been discovered on the farm of Mr. Gano Hildreth, on the Winchester pike.

A small branch runs through the farm and in the valley of the woodland its course had been changed. During the period when the heavy rains descend the little stream swells far beyond its banks and the water has gradually eaten away an embankment. Mr. Hildreth had occasion a few days ago to walk along the bank of the stream when he observed the bones of a human skeleton protruding, and upon investigation found them to be of unusual length and size, as if they were the remains of some powerful Indian warrior who had fallen there. The bones visible are those of the legs below the knees, and are in fair state of preservation.

Officers Arrested.

On a warrant sworn out in Nicholas county, Detective Gus Klein and Jailer Charles T. Wilson of Mt. Sterling, were arrested by Sheriff Prweitt, giving bond for their appearance at Carlisle next week in the sum of $250 each. The officers went to Nicholas county and secured a buggy top which it is alleged, had been stolen from the Thomas livery stable in that city, and the man from whose warrant the officers took the top had them arrested for taking his property, claiming to own it.

Hargis Acquitted.

James Hargis, the Breathitt county feud leader, is a free man, with no murder charge pending against him in any court for the first time in four years. After Floyd Byrd, who has been the backbone of the prosecutions for the murders in Breathitt, had withdrawn from the case in disgust at being forced into a trial without important witnesses, Judge Moody, at Sandy Hook, directed the jury to acquit Hargis of the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox, and Hargis left the court room surrounded by his friends. This was the last case against him, and ends the prosecution after four years of agitation.

Magnificent Stables Burns.

The stables on John Wanamaker's estate, at Lyndhurst, near Jenkintown, a suburb of Philadelphia, were destroyed by fire Sunday entailing a loss estimated at $100,000. Lyndhurst Mr. Wanamaker's country home, was destroyed by fire February last, causing a loss of nearly $2,000,000.

Plot To Massacre Americans.

Capt. Alexanders plans to beautify the grounds of Moro Castle by planting one hundred coconut palms led the natives to infer that the Americans intended to permanently remain on the Island, and their patriotic ardor prompted them to plot to massacre the foreigners July 12 and wipe out the garrison. The soldiers prepared to resist. In the meantime, secret service officers laid bare the projected uprising.

Foot Crushed Off.

While standing on the platform of a passenger coach of a Cincinnati Southern passenger train, at Georgetown Sunday the left foot of Miss Vilma Ashurst, of that city, slipped between the bumpers. At that instant an engine collided with the rear of the train, jamming the coaches and crushing off the young woman's foot. Her condition is critical.

Nothing Doing.

"Nothing doing!" Is that slang? I thought it was until I came upon the words in Dickens' Dombey & Son.

In chapter 4 Sol Gillis is explaining to his nephew Walter why the shop must be closed and the business abandoned.

"You see, Walter," said he, "in truth this business is merely a habit with me. I am so accustomed to the habit that I could hardly live if I relinquished it, but there's nothing doing, nothing doing."

So, you see, the phrase had it pathetic fitness many years ago and is not slang at all.
